The fleet will host waterborne divers, scientific researchers and marine wildlife experts, with a number of special events to mark the start of the summer diving season, in a dozen coastal centres, including Cairns, Townsville, Green Island, Ingham, Cidre, Hervey Bay and Port Douglas. But don't expect to see tourists milling around the restaurants and tiki bars in that area. The diving areas on offer to the public is restricted to the top of the reef, where people can take their snorkelling gear. Anyone who doesn't want to visit the reef under public light can do so from the 13th of January – at 6am. The timing of the ban, during daylight savings period in Australia, means there is a strange twilight at midday. It also means that access to popular dive sites, for recreational divers, will be restricted, with relaxed conditions until further notice. More than a dozen tourists, mostly from the Philippines, have drowned on the Great Barrier Reef since the start of the year. Officials have questioned whether the longer days have led to a change in behaviour, resulting in greater numbers visiting the reef at the end of winter, before conditions get too hot. One government survey found as many as 70 per cent of water users have restricted their activities. "At the moment it's still very limited, but I think that for more areas on the reef there will be little impact," dive instructor Sharyn Golden said. "However, for the more popular sites, such as Lady Elliot Islands, Trunk Reef, Whitehaven, the tourists will be focusing on the reef from January and they will be more affected. "We've had lots of visitor groups and boats in the water this summer with lots of room for visitors on the topside, but for the popular sites it's definitely going

The trouble I'm experiencing is that if I'm configuring the build for local development I'd like it to stop passing the other parts in the build since it doesn't make sense in this case. I'm using the following profiles: local: local local-property value f678ea9f9e
